Editorial

Our accounts are published this month and a summary can be seen on page 80. We thank John Coverdale for auditing the accounts. You will see that we have again made a loss on the year. However that is not currently a problem and we will continue publishing, although we may need to review our advertising rates later in the year. We will also be chasing up those organisations and societies who do not always send in their contributions on time, and sometimes never!

The dreaded GDPR is upon us and like everyone else we need to make a statement about it. So far as readers are concerned, we hold no information of any sort except for those very few to whom we post copies of the magazine. In this case we only hold addresses, which are held securely on a computer. In the case of advertisers we hold names, addresses, telephone numbers and payment details as well as a record of when their adverts have appeared in the magazine. These records are also held securely on a computer. If you want us to change any of this information please get in touch with the treasurer on 480575.

We will make a more detailed statement next month.

Stephen
